

Supporting Children by Reading at Home

Why is learning to read so important?

“Reading is the one ability, that once set in motion, has the ability to feed itself, grow exponentially and provide a basis from which possibilities are limitless.”

(Michael Morpurgo)

The importance of talk

Children from 'talk a lot' families have heard 33 million words by the age of 3 and will have had 1700 hours of stories.

Children from 'not talk a lot' families have only heard 9 million words by the age of 3 and will have only had 25 hours of stories.

Decodable books

These books are closely matched to your child's phonic knowledge and enable them to practice reading words containing letters they already know. Repeated reading of these books helps children to store words in their long term memory.

'Real' books

Did you know that being read to is the most powerful predictor of your child's future reading comprehension?

As well as practising with decodable books, being read to is also really important for your child to develop a love of reading and to increase their vocabulary.

Pavlovian impact of oxytocin

Reading together releases oxytocin, the 'love' hormone and paves the way for children to become lifelong readers.

Mummy loves me
I love mummy
Mummy loves books
I love books.

Don't stop reading to your child, even when they can read by themselves. The oxytocin effect still applies!

By reading aloud to your child every day, you are fusing the act of reading with comfort and love – you are hardwiring their brains for success.

When you read to your child you give them:

- Your attention
- The ability to pay attention, to focus on something shared
- Time to chat
- A breadth of vocabulary and a deeper understanding of language
- Knowledge of new places and people, real and imagined
- Knowledge of how stories work
- Understanding of analogy
- The ability to think ahead, hypothesize and infer what characters are thinking
- Opportunity to discuss moral issues: right from wrong
- Phonological sensitivity to alliteration, rhyme and rhythm

English Hub

Ramsbury English Hub

Top tips when reading aloud...

- Make it feel like a treat – enjoy the time together
- Show excitement about what you are going to read
- Read the whole story/chapter without stopping too much
- Chat about the story
- Don't ask questions to test what they remember
- Link stories to experiences and other stories
- Read their favourite stories again and again
- Get them to join in with the bits they remember
- Read with enthusiasm, try out different voices

Free online books

Hold control and click to visit the websites. There are thousands of online books here!

Stories to listen to together

Hold control and click to visit the websites and listen to stories being read by authors, actors and other people!

Kids poems and stories with Michael Rosen

(Free to stream on Alexa)

Storytime Online

Link to other stories

Once you learn to read, you will be forever free.

-Frederick Douglass